Hiring Team, Sony Interactive Entertainment

At Pixis I owned the account strategy for an 8-client e-commerce portfolio running in international, non-English markets and cut churn 50% with proactive, trigger-based playbooks built around where each account sat in its own lifecycle. At Plug Power I automated the Mar-Tech stack, Salesforce, Adobe Analytics, GA and Google Tag Manager, into a single closed-loop reporting layer across every campaign touchpoint, then automated the WordPress and Pardot lead flow across 50+ campaigns to cut cost per lead in half. Those are the same mechanics your posting describes: owned-channel programs that respond to player behavior automatically, report their own performance, and scale across a global footprint.

The segmentation and personalization work carries through the rest of my background. At Sensata I built KPI frameworks in SQL and GA4 across 50K+ connected devices to find the high-intent cohorts worth a personalized nudge, then turned that into email and paid launch campaigns that lifted qualified leads 35% across North America and Europe. As Pricing Lead there, I ran AP26 forecasting models and competitive benchmarking that moved revenue 12% year over year, the kind of data-driven case that has to hold up when a stakeholder pushes back on it. At Applied Materials now, I build the forecasting and market-sizing models that turn Sales and Engineering input into one view, and automate the recurring analysis behind that work with AI agents built on Claude.

What stands out in this role is the scope: one lifecycle and owned-channel strategy across Product, Hardware and Brand, run with Creative Studio, Data Science and Measurement teams spanning the Americas, Europe and Asia. Turning behavioral data into a channel plan, shipping the automation that scales it, and proving the result to a room full of stakeholders is exactly the loop I have run at Pixis, Plug Power and Sensata, just at a global scale instead of a regional one, and I would like to bring it to the player relationships behind PlayStation.
