Adhithya Rokhith Bhaskar

San Francisco Bay Area, CA | arokhith@gmail.com | +1-929-563-9974

November 2, 2026

Hiring Team, Zylu

Your posting says this is not a digital marketing role, and that if someone's background is channel execution without revenue ownership, it is not the right fit. At Pixis I carried P&L targets for an 8-client portfolio and cut churn 50% by fixing retention playbooks by vertical, not by spending harder on ads. That is the same funnel ownership your Head of Growth brief asks for: one person accountable for CAC, activation, conversion and retention together instead of a channel scorecard.

Founding PriceKeel put me on the other side of a B2B SaaS deal. I built the company's CRM, CPQ, forecast and pipeline reviews myself because no one else would, and I run pilots across RevOps, Sales and Finance by directing a small team rather than touching every channel personally. That maps directly to the reporting gap your posting names: deal-level conversion and retention visibility, not just top-of-funnel traffic or lead counts, and it is the first thing I would build.

Running PPC across international, non-English markets at Pixis, alongside retail media on Amazon Ads and Criteo, is the closest real analog I have to operating two different playbooks at once: a self-serve motion in one market and a sales-assisted one in another. Pair that with the pricing work at Sensata, where repricing against willingness to pay recovered $700K in margin and lifted revenue 12% without touching acquisition spend, and growth and monetization start moving together instead of trading off.

What I would bring in the first two quarters is the funnel diagnosis your posting asks for, backed by reporting that shows the leak, not another channel audit. Proof trail at adhi-growth-ai.vercel.app/ref/zylu.

Adhithya Rokhith Bhaskar