Adhithya Rokhith Bhaskar

San Francisco Bay Area, CA | arokhith@gmail.com | +1-929-563-9974

November 3, 2026

Hiring Team, Cogent

Your posting says a traditional marketing background is not required, that you want a launch and scale operator who has led complex cross functional programs and built the operating system behind them. That is the job I already run at PriceKeel: I set up and operate the company's own CRM and CPQ, including deal desk approvals, and the forecast and pipeline reviews that turn account signal into the next move, and I built the audit trail that gives Finance one clean, contract-level record of every pricing decision rather than a spreadsheet nobody fully trusts.

The systems-thinking piece you describe, mapping a process, finding the friction, and working with a technical partner to fix it, is the same discipline behind the Bleeders and Leakers dashboard I built at Sensata: 1,200 opportunities tracked against a $627M target across 3 regions and 20 product lines, with win rate, avg dollars per win, and stage distribution broken out by salesperson. I did not stop at the dashboard; I went back into the CRM data feeding it and caught mismatched product-line tags and stale stages before they skewed a region's number. That same quarter the fixes it surfaced recovered over $700K in margin, the kind of call you make on imperfect, in-flight data, not a clean report.

Claude and similar AI agents are already a default part of how I work, not a layer bolted on after the fact. At Applied Materials I use them to build forecasting and market-sizing models and automate the recurring parts of the reporting cycle, the same instinct a GTM Engineer and this seat would need to turn intent, competitive activity, and event signal into a play instead of a backlog.

West is a region, not a department, which means the plan, the play, and the follow up all have to live in one person's head before they live in the system. I want that seat: turn the ICP into account tiers Sales can act on, build the cadence that tells the team what is working, and show up at the dinners and events that turn engagement into pipeline. Proof trail at adhithyabhaskar.vercel.app/ref/cogent.

Adhithya Rokhith Bhaskar