Hiring Team, Nooks

Your posting says a broken tag or a mis-set budget costs real pipeline, so the work has to be right every time. That is the standard I held myself to at Plug Power, where I owned Google and Microsoft Ads hands-on, account structure through bidding through copy, and cut CPA 25% through bid optimization and A/B testing while automating the Mar-Tech stack (Salesforce, Adobe Analytics, GA, Google Tag Manager) for closed-loop reporting so nothing slipped between a click and a number leadership could trust.

You want someone who opens the ad account instead of waiting for a report. At Plug Power I built and presented the media plan for $100K/month budgets across multiple business units, owned pacing against those forecasts, and tied SEM performance to MQL quality and stage 1 opportunities across 50+ inbound campaigns. At Pixis I hired and managed an 8-person team running 8 client accounts with per-client budgets of $15K-$90K/month, including paid social, retail media (Amazon Ads, Criteo) and iOS app UA, and delivered 3x ROAS in a month for a fashion brand through a full-funnel rebuild: shopping feed cleanup, smart bidding, creative refresh and lookalike expansion. Managing an agency's work and managing my own account were often the same week.

You named daily AI tool use as a must-have, not a nice-to-have, and that part of the posting did not need translating for me. I run Claude-built AI agents daily at Applied Materials to automate recurring analysis, and I have shipped that instinct as a builder, not just a user: I wrote the PRD, scoped the MVP and shipped an automated job-matching and resume-tailoring workflow for SwipeHire using the OpenAI API, onboarding 50+ early users without an agency or outside vendor. Working at an applied AI lab that sells the thing I already use to do my own job every day is a rare match, not a line I'm reaching for.

I'd welcome 15 minutes to talk through how I'd structure the first 90 days of paid search, demand creation and ad ops at Nooks. A fuller trail of this work lives at adhi-growth-ai.vercel.app/ref/nooks.
