Hiring Team, Talent Pro

I founded PriceKeel's go-to-market from zero: no CRM, no CPQ, no forecast or pipeline review, no deal-approval process. I built all of it, then ran pilots with early B2B SaaS customers while raising the company's first round, owning positioning and the investor narrative myself. That is the exact shape of the 0-to-1 scaling and from-scratch process work this Founder's Office seat asks for, and it is first-principles execution, not an advisory engagement.

I also know what it is to work directly with the people who own the number, not around them. At Sensata I modeled AP26 revenue scenarios directly with senior executives, alongside site-transition strategy and multimillion-dollar customer quotes, then led the Bleeders and Leakers program end to end and recovered $700K+ in margin in two quarters. Before that, at Applied Materials, I size the semiconductor market directly with Sales, Engineering and Accounts and carry P&L and revenue targets for the role, the kind of cross-functional, high-impact initiative a founder's office runs by default.

Hands-on team leadership is not new to me either. At Pixis I hired and managed an 8-person team running 8 client accounts, carrying P&L and revenue targets directly, and cut client churn 50% by rebuilding account strategy from scratch rather than handing the problem to a deck. At Plug Power I hired and managed a marketing team while owning $100K/month in acquisition budgets across multiple business units, building the plans myself before they ever reached leadership for approval.

What I would bring on day one is a founder's track record of building processes and owning a revenue number from zero, direct experience partnering with senior leadership on the initiatives that matter to them, and a bias toward running the team and the work rather than advising from the side.
