Adhithya Rokhith Bhaskar

San Francisco Bay Area, CA | arokhith@gmail.com | +1-929-563-9974

October 16, 2026

Hiring Team, Develop Health

Your posting says success here means owning one number, the share of first-time provider offices that respond, and that you need someone who ships the fax, the email and the secure message personally instead of directing an agency. That is the job I already run: at Plug Power I owned the account structure and sequencing across Google, Microsoft and Meta myself on $100K/month in spend, and when the WordPress-to-Pardot lead flow was the bottleneck I automated it end to end, cutting cost per lead 50% by turning a manual first touch into a repeatable playbook.

Deciding channel mix by the type of recipient is also not new to me. At Pixis I set the channel mix client by client across an 8-client, $15K-$90K-per-month portfolio, adding a channel only when the response data supported it and cutting churn 50% by not defaulting to more spend when one channel stalled. That is the same test, read, scale, or stop discipline your posting describes for provider offices by practice size, specialty and history with you, except the lever there was retail media and non-English-market PPC instead of fax and EHR messaging.

The AI-first part of the role is also already how I work, not a tool I am adopting for this job. I ship forecasting and reporting with AI agents built on Claude at Applied Materials, producing finished analysis personally instead of a dashboard someone else interprets, and I built an AI product, SwipeHire, zero to one on my own: wrote the PRD, shipped the auto-tailored output and the matching logic, and ran 8+ A/B tests on activation without a review committee slowing any of it down. That is the same workflow your posting asks for: an idea becomes a live test the same day, and the taste to know when the output is good enough to send.

Proof trail at adhi-growth-ai.vercel.app/ref/develop-health.

Adhithya Rokhith Bhaskar