Hiring Team, QIMA

Turning market priorities into a regional plan with a revenue number attached is the job you are describing, and it is the one I ran at Sensata: I owned GTM end to end, positioning, pricing, channel and launch, for a new sensing product line across North America and Europe, and took it to $2M+ in first-year revenue with +35% qualified leads. That is the same translation this role asks for, technical capability and commercial objective into a program that a sales team can actually run with.

Execution is where I spend most of my time, not the strategy deck. At Plug Power I directed $100K/month in marketing budgets across multiple business units, ran the paid search and paid social campaigns myself, Google, Microsoft, Meta, LinkedIn, and built the SQL and GA4 reporting that tied every dollar back to conversion and CPA. At Sensata I did the same for sales enablement, building the decks and case studies that lifted a 50-rep team's win rate 30%. A regional marketer who partners with sales leadership and still ships the campaign is exactly the hands-on operator this role needs.

I also build with the generative AI tools this posting calls out directly. As Strategic Marketing III at Applied Materials I automate recurring market research and content drafting with AI agents built on Claude, which is less about the tool and more about freeing time for the judgment calls, which positioning to test, which channel to cut, that a fast-moving regional program needs every week.

QIMA transforming its commercial engine while scaling across 100+ countries is the kind of fast, high-ownership marketing seat I look for. Proof trail at adhi-product.vercel.app/ref/qima.
