

Adhithya Rokhith Bhaskar

San Francisco Bay Area, CA | arokhith@gmail.com | +1-929-563-9974

October 2, 2026

Hiring Team, Human Archive

At Pixis I hired and managed an 8-person team running 8 client accounts at once, with daily budgets, performance tracking in Amplitude and Tableau, and account-specific playbooks that cut churn 50%. That is the same ground-level operating rhythm your role is describing: the right people, on the right accounts, with daily visibility into throughput and quality.

Building processes from zero is not new to me either. At PriceKeel, the company I founded, I built the full operating system myself, including the audit trail that keeps every decision explainable and consistent at scale, the same quality-bar discipline a workforce scaling from hundreds to thousands needs baked in from day one. At Applied Materials I build the forecasting models that keep a demand plan realistic, and I automate the repetitive side of that reporting with Claude agents so the daily numbers get the attention a fast-moving operation needs.

I also know what it is to design incentives that move a team: at Sensata I built the KPI dashboard that gave 20 product lines one shared way to track performance daily, and at Pixis the playbooks I rolled out worked because they were specific to the account, not generic policy.

Proof trail at adhithyabhaskar.vercel.app/ref/human-archive.

Adhithya Rokhith Bhaskar