Hiring Team, Pallet

At Sensata I owned GTM for new sensing products end to end, positioning, pricing, channel and launch, driving $2M+ in first-year revenue, then built the sales enablement that got 50+ reps actually using a new pitch, lifting win rates 30%. That is the full span your posting describes, product through sales through marketing, not one slice of it.

The analytical half runs just as deep. At Applied Materials I size the semiconductor market with Sales, Engineering and Accounts, turning technical input into one view executives act on, and I automate the repetitive parts of that analysis with Claude agents so the strategic work gets the time instead. At Sensata I also ran 30+ customer interviews to find real adoption blockers before shipping a fix, the same feedback-to-action loop this role runs.

I also know what it is like to carry the whole motion myself: as founder of PriceKeel I run pricing, deal approvals, forecasting and customer pilots solo, the high-intensity range a startup GTM seat needs on day one.
