Hiring Team, PragatiX

Building an institution from the ground up means a long list of initiatives with one owner and no playbook to copy. I run exactly that at PriceKeel: I am leading the first-round raise directly with investors while running pilots with early customers, and I built the CRM, CPQ, forecast reviews and the audit trail Finance uses to trust a pricing call, all without anyone to hand the ambiguous parts to. That is the founder's-proxy work your Chief of Staff seat is describing, translating a vision into a portfolio of owned outcomes before the first batch has even enrolled.

I carry that same instinct inside a much larger organization. At Applied Materials I sit between Sales, Engineering and Accounts, turning scattered field input into one market-sizing view leadership can act on, and I run the OKR cadence behind weekly and quarterly business reviews so cross-functional teams stay pointed at the same number. At Sensata I worked close enough to the executive team to shape AP26 revenue models and site-transition strategy myself, recovering $700K+ in margin in two quarters by taking an ambiguous pricing problem to a negotiated outcome, the same bridge between finance, strategy and execution a BFSI-focused institution needs its Chief of Staff to hold.

BITS Pilani is also where I first ran a venture end to end at Qbox, which is probably why founder-proxy work keeps finding me.
