Hiring Team, Zylu

At Pixis I ran an 8-client portfolio where the real job was never one channel, it was owning the whole customer arc: acquisition, activation, and keeping the account once it was won. I cut churn 50% across that portfolio by building retention playbooks by vertical, not by spending harder on the top of the funnel. Your Head of Growth brief reads the same way, one person accountable for CAC, conversion, activation and retention together instead of a channel scorecard, and that is the seat I want.

Founding PriceKeel put me on the other side of the table from where I used to sit: selling a B2B SaaS product into RevOps, Sales and Finance, running pilots, and watching trial-to-paid conversion up close as the number that actually decides whether a quarter works. I know what makes a vertical SaaS buyer hesitate at the trial line, because I have had to get them past it myself. Pair that with the pricing and packaging work I did at Sensata, where repricing against willingness to pay recovered $700K in margin and lifted revenue 12% without touching acquisition spend, and I can help Zylu fix the unit economics behind $3M in ARR, not just the top-line number.

I also carry the cross-functional and operating side of a growth seat. At Sensata I partnered with Product on 30+ customer interviews that fed a roadmap and lifted CSAT 22%, and at Applied Materials I carry P&L and revenue targets today while automating the repetitive parts of growth reporting with AI agents built on Claude, so the time goes to the experiments and the customer calls instead of the spreadsheet. Running PPC in international, non-English markets at Pixis is the closest match I have to operating growth across two markets at once, and I would bring that same discipline to India and the UAE.

What I would bring on day one is full-funnel ownership, acquisition through retention and expansion, plus the pricing instincts to make trial-to-paid conversion and NRR move together instead of trading off against each other. Proof trail at adhi-growth.vercel.app/ref/zylu.
