Hiring Team, Intuit

Your posting for Money Revenue Strategy & Operations asks for someone who can build and run the operating cadence behind a VP of Sales: planning, forecasting and performance reviews that the business actually trusts. That is the system I built at Sensata. The FY2026 Bleeders and Leakers Power BI scorecard tracked 1,200 pricing opportunities against a $627M target, with win rate, avg $/win and stage distribution by salesperson, and it replaced a set of spreadsheets nobody trusted with one view Sales and Finance both used every week.

A scorecard only earns its keep if it changes what happens next, so I did not stop at the dashboard. I used it to recover $700K+ in margin in two quarters and to lift distributor and channel-partner margins from 53% to 61%, work I ran alongside senior executives on revenue models and multimillion-dollar customer quotes. That is the financial modeling and cross-functional initiative leadership your posting calls out, and it is the same operating loop I run today at PriceKeel, where I set up the company's own CRM, CPQ and forecast reviews and built the audit trail Finance uses to sign off on every discount call.

The ambiguity-to-clarity part of this role is not new territory either. At Applied Materials I size the semiconductor market with Sales, Engineering and Accounts, turning scattered field input into one strategic view for leadership, then build the forecasting models that feed quarterly business reviews and executive narratives. And the comfort with analytics tools your posting asks for is a daily habit: I run Power BI, Tableau and SQL against CRM data to find the business challenges that are actually slowing growth, not just the ones that are easy to measure.

Money is Intuit's newest growth engine, and a strategy and operations partner earns their seat by shipping the number the sales org agrees on, then using it to move the business forward, not just report on it. That is the pattern I would bring from day one. Proof trail at adhithyabhaskar.vercel.app/ref/intuit.
