Adhithya Rokhith Bhaskar

San Francisco Bay Area, CA | arokhith@gmail.com | +1-929-563-9974

October 21, 2026

Hiring Team, ThoughtSpot

Your Competitive Intelligence Manager posting is really asking for one loop run on repeat: monitor the market, synthesize it into messaging, pricing and roadmap insights, and arm sales with the battlecards and talking points that win the deal. I have run that loop at Sensata, where I benchmarked 10+ competitors across channel, pricing and market share to realign Industrial BU strategy, driving +12% YoY revenue and +8% market share, work that fed directly into the competitive talking points I briefed to senior executives alongside multimillion-dollar customer quotes.

The cross-functional half of the role, training sales and marketing and reporting win/loss analysis to executives, is not new either. As Product & Growth Marketing at Sensata I monitored competitor moves and customer purchasing patterns across EMEA and the US, turning the analysis into win/loss-style calls for category leadership, and built sales enablement materials that lifted win rates 30% for a 50-rep team. On the consulting side, I led a 5-consultant team through a 10+ competitor teardown for Safran, sizing a market from 170 facilities down to a SAM of 28 and presenting pricing-strategy assessments to Safran leadership, the kind of structured competitive read this role asks for when it supports PMM with market assessments.

Data without a story does not move a sales team. I build the leadership decks and run the OKRs behind quarterly business reviews at Applied Materials today, where I size the semiconductor market with Sales and Engineering and track competitive and demand inflection points, and I have automated the recurring version of that reporting with AI agents built on Claude so the hours go into the next competitive read instead of rebuilding the last one. I would want to spend the first weeks on ThoughtSpot's competitive set the way I did at Sensata: sit with Sales and Field Marketing, find where the current battlecards are thin, and ship the first refreshed one before the next deal review.

ThoughtSpot is selling into a market where the AI analytics story changes fast, and I would like to bring the same competitive-benchmarking and win-loss discipline that moved share at Sensata to that fight. Proof trail at adhithyabhaskar.vercel.app/ref/thoughtspot.

Adhithya Rokhith Bhaskar