Hiring Team, Plaid

Your posting describes owning the internal tooling that removes manual work for sellers and gives them the right view of their accounts at the right time. That is close to exactly what I built this year. PriceKeel is a decision-integrity layer that sits inside a deal platform's CRM and CPQ, reading live discount exceptions and recommending an explainable guardrail that Sales, RevOps and Finance can act on without leaving their workflow. I am not stretching a resume line to fit your req. It is the same problem, seen from the seller's side of the deal instead of the pricing lead's side.

The part of your JD I paid closest attention to is the line about a clear point of view on human versus AI ownership of tasks. Building PriceKeel forced me to draw that line explicitly: the system recommends a guardrail from closed-won and closed-lost patterns, a person makes the actual discount call, and the audit trail records that decision with evidence Finance can check later. I run the same discipline at Applied Materials, where I automate the recurring market-sizing and forecasting work with AI agents built on Claude so the analysis a model can do stops eating the hours a person needs for judgment calls.

I have also sat on the account-lifecycle side of this problem. At Sensata I equipped 50+ reps with sales enablement that lifted win rates 30%, and I owned GTM for a new product line across North America and Europe end to end, positioning, pricing, channel and launch, which drove $2M+ in first-year revenue from the accounts sales brought in. At Pixis I cut client churn 50% running proactive account strategy and vertical playbooks across an 8-client, $15K-$90K/month portfolio, the same retention and expansion logic an account-lifecycle PM reasons from first principles. Different industries, same shape of work: give the operational user a system that gets smarter from real deal and account data, then let them decide faster.

I would welcome 15 minutes to walk through where PriceKeel maps onto this role. Proof trail at adhi-product-ai.vercel.app/ref/plaid.
