Hiring Team, Assort Health

At Sensata, I ran the competitor and customer analysis across EMEA and the US that turned purchasing patterns and competitor market share into a point of view sales and product acted on. That is the same end-to-end competitive intelligence function your posting describes: competitor tracking, win/loss, and a real-time point of view, not a quarterly slide nobody opens.

The rest of the mandate is work I already run. I wrote the positioning and messaging framework for a brand-new sensing product line, turning technical features into a buyer value story that lifted conversion 15% on priority launches, then owned the GTM end to end (positioning, pricing, channel, launch) to $2M+ in first-year revenue. I built the sales enablement, decks, case studies, objection handling, that took win rates up 30% for 50+ reps, and ran 30+ structured customer interviews that fed straight into product and raised CSAT 22%. Strategy, assets, and adoption across the revenue team is one motion for me, not three separate projects.

The pricing half is also live today. As Sensata's Pricing Lead I recovered $700K+ in margin in two quarters running the Bleeders and Leakers program, and partnered with senior executives on multimillion-dollar customer quotes that raised distributor margins from 53% to 61%. Partnering with Product and Revenue leadership on pricing and packaging while I am also the one writing the messaging that sells it is not a new combination to build.

Assort's jump from 15 people to a product marketing function built around a dedicated competitive intelligence hire is the stage I want to join at. I would like to talk about which piece, competitor tracking, win/loss, or the first KLAS or Gartner relationship, you want stood up first.
