Hiring Team, Genentech

Your Ophthalmology team is preparing for pending launches while still competing today, and that dual mandate, run the current portfolio and stand up the omnichannel engine for what is coming, is what I spent the last year doing at Sensata. I owned the go-to-market for a new sensing-product line: positioning, channel, launch, and the integrated email and paid campaigns underneath it, which drove $2M+ in first-year revenue and 35% more qualified leads.

The part of this posting I would lean into hardest is tailoring content to specific customer segments rather than writing one message for everyone. At Sensata I built positioning that turned technical features into customer value for distinct buyer segments, lifting conversion 15% on priority launches, and I grounded that work in 30+ customer interviews with OEMs and distributors before a single asset got built. I also managed the agencies and sales-enablement materials behind those campaigns for 50+ field reps, which raised win rates 30%, so I understand the handoff between a content brief, an agency's execution, and a field team that has to carry the message.

Measurement is the other half of the role you describe, and it is the half I built for a living at Sensata as Pricing Lead: a Power BI dashboard that scored 1,200 opportunities against a $627M target with win rate, average dollar per win, and stage-distribution KPIs, the same leading-and-lagging-indicator instinct a launch-and-portfolio campaign needs to know what to optimize, stop, or scale.

That playbook, integrated omnichannel launch campaigns grounded in customer evidence and measured against hard KPIs, is one I have already run end to end in a regulated, technical B2B market, and it transfers directly to a portfolio preparing for its next launches. More of that work is at adhi-product.vercel.app/ref/genentech, and I would welcome a conversation about the Ophthalmology portfolio's upcoming launches.
