Hiring Team, Mettler-Toledo

Your posting asks one person to own SEO, SEA and paid social as a single strategy, not three separate line items. I have run exactly that combination before. At Plug Power I owned paid search and paid social across Google, Microsoft, Meta and LinkedIn, cutting CPA 25% and cost per lead 50% while raising organic search visibility 35% on the same budget cycle, so the paid and organic sides were never working from different playbooks.

The part of this role about creating and updating web pages for product launches and campaigns is not new territory either. At GenY Medium I audited backlinks and keyword architecture myself, then rebuilt the Google Merchant Center and Meta catalog feeds behind a 16x ROAS lift and a 36% conversion gain for a B2B e-commerce client, the same structured-product-data work a precision-instrument catalog across 140+ countries would need maintained and current.

Reporting dashboards across channels only matter if someone can read them and act. I built the cross-channel dashboards at Plug Power that tied SEM performance to MQL quality, and at Sensata I ran SQL and GA4 KPI frameworks across 50,000-plus connected devices, the kind of fluency your posting asks for directly. I have also directed a team before, an 8-person group running 8 client accounts at Pixis, and worked cross-timezone with OEMs and distributors at Sensata, so morning calls with a Zurich-based team are a normal week, not a new adjustment.

I am Strategic Marketing III at Applied Materials now, where I run AI agents built on Claude to automate the market and competitive research I used to do by hand, the same habit of treating repetitive reporting as something to automate rather than repeat manually.
