Hiring Team, Mintive

"You'd rather build the machine than feed it" is the line that got me. It's also a fair summary of my last six months. As founder of PriceKeel, I set up our CRM and CPQ, our deal approvals and our forecast and pipeline reviews from nothing, then built the product itself: a guardrail engine that learns discount limits from a company's own closed-won and closed-lost deals, and an audit trail that gives every pricing decision an owner and evidence Finance can check.

The data foundation piece of your role is the work I know best. At Sensata I built the FY2026 Bleeders and Leakers Power BI model, which became the one place Sales and Finance looked: 1,200 pricing opportunities against a $627M target, cut by region, product line and salesperson, with win rate, average dollars per win and stage distribution. It surfaced $433M in margin gaps, and the program around it recovered $700K+ in margin in two quarters. I also raised distributor and channel-partner margins from 53% to 61%, so I've lived the arguments about which partner deserves credit for which dollar.

On the agent side, I use Claude every day. At Applied Materials, where I'm Strategic Marketing III, I automate repetitive analysis with AI agents built on Claude, and I built forecasting models across multiple product groups. Before that I shipped an AI job-matching platform on the OpenAI API and automated a WordPress and Pardot lead flow at Plug Power that cut cost per lead 50%. Your 90-day goal of three agents live with measured impact is how I'd want to be judged.

If I joined, I'd start where your posting does: inventory every workflow across sales, marketing, support, finance and alliances, rank it by revenue impact and hours burned, and ship against the top of the list while the definitions of pipeline and forecast get settled with your Head of Revenue. I'd welcome 20 minutes to walk through how I'd sequence the first three builds.
