Adhithya Rokhith Bhaskar

San Francisco Bay Area, CA | arokhith@gmail.com | +1-929-563-9974

October 11, 2026

Hiring Team, Reducto

At PriceKeel, the company I founded, I own GTM and positioning for a decision-integrity layer selling into RevOps, Sales leadership and Finance, the same CRM, CPQ and deal-approval workflow enterprise buyers live in day to day. Before that I built SwipeHire zero-to-one: wrote the PRD, defined the ICP, and ran the GTM and analytics stack myself, taking it from nothing to 50+ early users and +25% activation. That is the founding-PMM motion your posting describes: own the function first, then build the team under it.

At Sensata I owned GTM for a new sensing product line across North America and Europe, positioning and launch work that drove $2M+ in first-year revenue and +35% qualified leads, then wrote the positioning that turned technical specs into buyer value and lifted launch conversion 15%. I built that messaging for two audiences at once, the engineers reading the spec sheet and the buyers signing the PO, which is the same split your post draws between AI/ML engineers and executive buyers.

I also built the sales enablement, decks, case studies, competitive positioning, that took win rate up 30% across 50+ reps, fed by 30+ customer interviews I ran myself. On the pricing side I drove +12% YoY revenue and +8% market share off competitive benchmarking across 10+ players, the kind of research a GTM team needs before it writes a single line of positioning.

Running a self-service motion next to an enterprise sales motion, and building the team under both, is exactly the two-sided GTM problem I want to own next. Proof trail at adhi-product-ai.vercel.app/ref/reducto.

Adhithya Rokhith Bhaskar