Adhithya Rokhith Bhaskar

San Francisco Bay Area, CA | arokhith@gmail.com | +1-929-563-9974

October 21, 2026

Hiring Team, BHIVE Workspace

The CEO's Office job you describe does not own one function, it owns whatever the CEO's agenda needs next, and that is the shape of work I already do. I built the FY2026 Power BI dashboard that gave Sensata's leadership a $627M decision-shaping view of its business, tracking 1,200 pricing opportunities across 3 regions and surfacing $433M in margin gaps for them to act on. That is the same decision-shaping analysis on financials and business performance this role asks for, just under a different product.

I hold an MS in Marketing Analytics from Simon Business School, not a full-time MBA, but the work that degree prepared me for is exactly this role's: I run the operating cadence, including CRM, CPQ, forecast and pipeline reviews and deal approvals, for PriceKeel, the company I founded, and I carry P&L and revenue targets as Strategic Marketing III at Applied Materials today. Org goals, review cadences and board-ready decks are not new territory, they are what I build at every stop.

Cross-functional delivery across a growing, multi-location operator is familiar ground too. At Sensata I ran a global pricing program across a multi-$100M industrial business unit, aligning Business Management, Engineering and Finance to one number and holding owners to timelines, the same cross-departmental alignment a 30-centre coworking operator needs from its CEO's Office.

I use AI tools like Claude daily for research and analysis at Applied Materials already, so that piece of the role needs no ramp-up. Proof trail at adhithyabhaskar.vercel.app/ref/bhive-workspace.

Adhithya Rokhith Bhaskar