Adhithya Rokhith Bhaskar

San Francisco Bay Area, CA | arokhith@gmail.com | +1-929-563-9974

October 21, 2026

Hiring Team, Commure

Your posting wants someone equally comfortable building a HubSpot workflow and presenting results to sales leadership, and that is the exact split I have run before. At Plug Power I automated the WordPress and Pardot lead flow end to end, cutting cost per lead 50% by tying every touch to attribution and stage-1 pipeline, the same closed-loop ownership this role names for HubSpot and Salesforce across Ambient AI, Call Center Agents and Orchestrator.

The ask to turn fit and intent data into campaigns, not just run more of them, is where I would start. At Sensata I ran paid and email launch campaigns that generated 35% more qualified leads, then built the sales enablement content that lifted win rates 30% across 50 reps, because the content only works if SDR follow-up actually matches the campaign brief. I ran 15 or more A/B tests tying SEM performance directly to MQL quality and stage-1 opportunities, the same optimize-every-stage discipline your funnel-measurement bullet describes.

You are explicit that this is an AI-first seat, not an AI-adjacent one. I already run AI agents built on Claude against my own research, forecasting and reporting work at Applied Materials, so the habit of asking what AI should own before I touch a task manually is already built in, not something I would be learning on the job.

I would start by auditing the lead-scoring and routing logic against Revenue Operations before building a single new campaign, the same sequencing that worked at Plug Power. Proof trail at adhi-growth-ai.vercel.app/ref/commure.

Adhithya Rokhith Bhaskar