Hiring Team, Snapmint

The clearest proof I can point to for a Strategy and Business Operations seat is a market-sizing engagement I led during my MS: a 5-consultant team, 170 facilities narrowed to a SAM of 28 across 4 verticals, presented directly to Safran's leadership. That is a structured, defensible answer to an ambiguous question under real time pressure, which is the exact muscle this role is asking a founder to be able to hand off.

I also know what it is to be the one making the call with no one to escalate to. I started PriceKeel this year, a B2B SaaS pricing tool, and I am the person who decided how to segment buyers into RevOps, Sales leadership and Finance, built the product and GTM around what each group needed, and am now running pilots while raising the company's first round. Supporting a founder through high-impact decisions is easier when you have had to make those decisions yourself with your own money on the line.

The cross-functional half of this role, coordinating Product, Growth, Operations and Finance and building the trackers that catch a problem before it becomes a crisis, is work I already run. At Applied Materials I partner with Sales, Engineering and Accounts to turn scattered field input into one market view, then automate the repetitive research behind it with AI agents built on Claude. At Sensata I built a Power BI tracker that ranked 1,200 pricing opportunities against a $627M target and surfaced $433M in margin risk for leadership to prioritize, which turned into $700K plus recovered in two quarters. That is monitoring, research and execution in one motion, not three separate jobs.

Snapmint is scaling a fast-moving BNPL business, and a Founder's Office seat there needs someone who can move between a spreadsheet and a leadership room in the same afternoon. I have been doing exactly that since 2021, across a large industrial company, an AI platform, and now a company I run myself. Proof trail at adhithyabhaskar.vercel.app/ref/snapmint.
