Hiring Team, Dodo Payments

At Sensata I did not inherit a dashboard, I built one: I mapped how 1,200 pricing opportunities moved through a $627M target across 3 regions and 20 product lines, found $433M in margin sitting in the gaps, and turned that map into the Bleeders and Leakers program that recovered $700K+ in two quarters and raised distributor margins from 53% to 61%. That is the exact motion your posting describes: map the workflow, cut the steps that do not earn their place, document the change as something a team actually follows, and track the before-and-after number. I would point that same process at the compliance, finance and risk workflows your Founder's Office needs mapped first.

The CEO-cadence half of the role I already run, just without a CEO's title on it. I founded PriceKeel, a pricing tool for B2B SaaS deal desks, and I am the one who owns its CRM, CPQ, forecast and pipeline reviews, and deal approvals, with an audit trail Finance can check against the underlying deal data, while also preparing the data room for our first raise. Nobody hands me a tracker or a milestone; I build both and close the loop myself, which is the discipline a weekly owner-and-deadline review across function heads is really asking for.

Cross-functional work with no natural owner is also not new to me. At Applied Materials I turn scattered Sales, Engineering and Accounts input into one management view and run the OKR cadence, weekly and quarterly business reviews included, that catches a slipping initiative before it compounds. At Pixis I hired and managed an 8-person team across 8 client accounts and cut churn 50% by redesigning the account-strategy process end to end, the same kind of SOP rebuild your posting wants aimed at onboarding, compliance or audit readiness. GenY Medium, where I was the liaison between regional marketing, localization and analytics teams with no formal authority over any of them, is where I learned to hold people accountable politely and get the handoff closed anyway.

I would welcome fifteen minutes to walk through how I would spend the first month mapping Dodo's CEO-initiative tracker and one cross-functional workflow end to end, built the same way I built Bleeders and Leakers: find the real bottleneck, ship the SOP, then run the cadence that keeps it honest.
