Hiring Team, Finix

At Sensata I built the email and paid campaigns that launched connected sensing products into North America and Europe: +35% qualified leads, then a GA4 and SQL KPI framework that told sales which cohorts were worth chasing. That is B2B direct response the way your posting describes it: campaigns judged on pipeline, not just clicks.

Your post asks for someone who owns SEM, paid social, display and remarketing end to end. At Plug Power I ran $100K/month across Google Ads, Microsoft Ads, Meta and LinkedIn Ads at once, backed every channel call with 15+ A/B tests, and automated the WordPress and Pardot lead flow to cut cost per lead 50%. I also unified reporting across Salesforce, Adobe Analytics and Google Tag Manager so budget moved toward what was actually converting, not what looked good in a dashboard.

Copy is part of the job, not an afterthought. At Sensata and Pixis I wrote the positioning that turned technical product into direct-response messaging, lifting conversion 15% and landing 3x ROAS in a single month. HubSpot, Salesforce and Pardot are already in my stack, and at Applied Materials I build the forecasting models that connect marketing spend to the P&L, automating the recurring half of that analysis with Claude AI agents so testing moves faster.

Payments infrastructure has to earn trust fast with a technical buyer, something I have done for connected sensing hardware at Sensata and semiconductor equipment at Applied Materials. I would like to bring that same direct-response discipline to Finix's pipeline.
