Adhithya Rokhith Bhaskar

San Francisco Bay Area, CA | arokhith@gmail.com | +1-929-563-9974

November 8, 2026

Hiring Team, Designs for Health

Your posting asks for someone who treats Sales HubSpot as a system to govern, not just a tool to use: requirements, reports, dashboards, and the data integration work that keeps pipeline numbers trustworthy across CRM, ERP and BI. At Sensata, I built the Bleeders and Leakers Power BI pipeline, 1,200 opportunities ranked against a $627M target, and it only held up because every stage reconciled cleanly across 3 regions and 20 product lines before a number reached leadership. That is the same discipline a functional CRM owner needs when Sales, Marketing, IT, Data and Finance all touch the same records.

I run that discipline right now. At PriceKeel, I operate the company's CRM and CPQ end to end, forecast and pipeline reviews, deal approvals, and the audit trail that gives Finance documented evidence for every decision. At Plug Power, I automated the WordPress and Pardot lead flow and the broader Mar-Tech stack across Salesforce, Adobe Analytics and GA for closed-loop reporting, which is the same integration troubleshooting your stack of HubSpot, NetSuite and Snowflake will need when the data does not line up on its own.

I have run CRM and reporting across B2B, B2C and DTC channels at Pixis, Plug Power and GenY Medium, the same channel mix your business spans. What I would bring to this seat is someone who has already built and governed the reporting a sales team depends on, trained reps on it, and reconciled it against the systems around it, not just logged tickets against someone else's configuration. Proof trail at adhithyabhaskar.vercel.app/ref/designs-for-health.

Adhithya Rokhith Bhaskar