Hiring Team, MultiLane Test Products

At Sensata I raised distributor and channel-partner margins from 53% to 61% in under two quarters, standardizing deal structure and discount approvals across an entire third-party channel in the Industrial BU. That is the global-channel-plus-discount-governance problem your Sales Operations Manager posting is asking someone to own for MLTP's reps and distributors across international territories, and it is work I have already done at scale.

Running the CRM and CPQ, forecast and pipeline reviews, and deal approvals is what I do daily now as founder of PriceKeel: every discount decision I approve carries an audit trail Finance can check against the deal data itself, not a spreadsheet reconstructed after the fact. The FY2026 Bleeders and Leakers dashboard I built at Sensata scored 1,200 opportunities against a $627M target, by region, product line and salesperson, and surfaced $433M in margin gaps for leadership to prioritize. That is the same forecasting and pipeline-discipline muscle your booking targets and deal-by-deal follow-up need, and it is why I am comfortable owning a forecast the first time someone reads it in a business review.

Quote governance and bid support are not new to me either. At Sensata I modeled AP26 revenue scenarios and multimillion-dollar customer quotes with senior executives, and at Applied Materials I size markets in direct partnership with Sales, Engineering and Accounts, turning field and technical input into one forecast. Keeping Applications Engineering, Product Management and Operations aligned on demo requests, evaluation units and sales order planning is the same cross-functional discipline I run today, just with different names on the org chart.

A brand-new joint venture building its first formal sales-ops function is the kind of problem I like: there is no legacy process to work around, just a channel that needs forecasting and discount-governance rigor built in from day one.
