Hiring Team, Cresta

Your posting asks for someone who can be the escalation owner from quote through final signature and architect creative deal structures with Sales on complex enterprise transactions. That is the loop I run myself every day at PriceKeel, the company I founded: I set up and run its CRM and CPQ configuration, forecast and pipeline reviews, and deal approvals, so every discount exception and deal structure gets reviewed before it reaches a signature, not after.

I have also made that call on real money, at scale. Leading the Bleeders and Leakers program at Sensata, I ran a win/loss-style retrospective on 1,200 pricing opportunities against a $627M target, recovering $700K plus in margin in two quarters by working each deal back from competitive gaps and the customer's own willingness to pay. In the same window I restructured contract terms on parts sold through distribution and moved distributor margins from 53% to 61%, then documented the governance behind it so Finance could audit the record rather than take my word for it. That is the same end-to-end quote-to-cash discipline your posting asks for, applied to a business where the margin on a bad deal does not show up until two quarters later.

The training piece of your posting is also familiar ground. At Sensata I built sales enablement, decks and case studies, for 50 plus reps on pricing and deal construction, lifting win rates 30%, the same instinct I would bring to training Cresta's sales teams on deal structure and pricing. And the CPQ and Salesforce fluency behind all of this did not start with PriceKeel: I configured and administered CRM and CPQ systems from the ground up there, and automated a Salesforce-based Mar-Tech stack at Plug Power for closed-loop, record-level reporting, the kind of system fluency that transfers to any specific CPQ platform's interface.

What I think is harder to find is someone who has sat on both sides of the same gate: the person running deal reviews and win/loss retros, and the person who built the guardrail engine and audit trail that governs them. I would bring that same ownership to Cresta's quote-to-cash lifecycle from week one. Proof trail at adhi-pricing-ai.vercel.app/ref/cresta.
