Hiring Team

The posting asks for someone who can build the financial models and investor materials a fundraise runs on, then turn those same numbers into the OKRs and cross-functional execution that keep a company's plan on track. At PriceKeel, the company I founded, I built the investor narrative and fundraising materials behind our own first round myself, including the financial models and due-diligence answers investors ask for, while running the day-to-day CRM, forecast and pipeline reviews, and deal approvals. Nobody handed me that structure. I built it because a growing company needed one and there was no one else to own it.

Before PriceKeel, I partnered with senior executives at Sensata on AP26 revenue models and site-transition strategy for a multi-$100M Industrial BU, the kind of leadership-meeting prep a Founder's Office puts together before a board update. I also built the FY2026 Bleeders and Leakers Power BI dashboard, ranking 1,200 pricing opportunities against a $627M target, then closed $700K+ of that gap in 2 quarters by negotiating directly with Sales and Finance, teams I had no formal authority to compel. That is the operational-excellence habit this role calls identifying bottlenecks and designing processes: a dashboard sharp enough for a leadership meeting, and the judgment to move a cross-functional room toward a decision.

At Applied Materials now, I turn ambiguous input from Sales, Engineering and Accounts into one market view and carry P&L and revenue targets with no formal authority over any of those teams, running the OKR cadence (weekly and quarterly business reviews) that keeps strategic initiatives visible to the people who have to act on them. That is the bridge between a Founder and department heads this role is built around, and I already run it on a weekly cycle. I automate the repetitive half of that analysis with AI agents built on Claude so the time goes toward the decision, not the formatting.

On the people side, I have hired and managed teams directly: an 8-person account team at Pixis running 8 client relationships, and the team behind SwipeHire, an AI job-matching platform I built zero-to-one. Fundraising and investor materials, financial modeling and dashboards, cross-functional execution without a title to lean on, and the hiring work that comes with scaling a team: I have already run all four, just at a different company's scale each time.
