Adhithya Rokhith Bhaskar

San Francisco Bay Area, CA | arokhith@gmail.com | +1-929-563-9974

October 17, 2026

Hiring Team, Taxbit

Your posting asks for someone who can turn a complex product into a customer narrative a sales team can use cold, across crypto, fintech and marketplace accounts. At Sensata I did the same work on a harder audience: I ran 30+ customer interviews with OEMs and distributors, turned the pain points into value propositions instead of feature lists, and watched conversion on priority launches move 15% and CSAT 22%. That habit, listen first, then write the story that holds up in a sales call, is what I would bring to Taxbit's customer base.

The cross-functional half of the role is just as familiar. I built the sales enablement content, case studies and decks, that 50+ Sensata reps used across North America and Europe, and that work moved win rates 30%. At Pixis I kept enterprise case studies current for an 8-client book and fed voice-of-customer findings straight back to product, the same loop between Sales, Customer Success and subject matter experts your posting describes. Project management is not a new skill I would be picking up on the job; it is the connective tissue of both of those roles.

Your posting also expects AI tools to scale output. I already run my own content and research pipeline through Claude agents at Applied Materials, and I spent a year as the liaison between regional marketing managers, localization and analytics teams at GenY Medium, so keeping a consistent story and tracking results across US, EMEA and APAC customers is not new ground either.

Proof trail at adhi-product.vercel.app/ref/taxbit.

Adhithya Rokhith Bhaskar