Hiring Team, Robinhood

Gold is the clearest growth-funnel problem I have seen in a job posting in a while: get someone to discover the membership, convince them to start a trial, convert that trial to paid, then keep them subscribed without eroding the unit economics that make the bundle work. I have run that exact shape of problem with real numbers behind it, just not inside a trading app yet.

At Pixis I owned an 8-client, $15K-$90K/month portfolio and cut churn 50% through proactive account strategy and vertical playbooks, the retention half of the Gold funnel. At Plug Power I ran 15+ A/B tests across Google Ads, Microsoft Ads, Meta and LinkedIn that cut CPA 25% and lifted conversion 20%, the acquisition and trial-to-paid half. Both required the same thing your posting asks for: generate a hypothesis, size it, test it, and read the result with enough rigor to scale it or kill it fast. At Sensata I modeled a BU-wide price-increase system that found where a 50%+ profitability swing was hiding, the kind of growth-versus-unit-economics trade-off a Gold offer or paywall price point runs every time.

I also know what it is like to own a consumer product end to end, not from inside a bigger platform team. SwipeHire was mine from the PRD to the UI: I made the entry-point, onboarding and matching-flow calls myself, ran 8+ A/B tests against GA4 funnel data, and lifted activation 25% for its first 50+ users. That is a smaller stage than millions of Robinhood customers, but it is the same craft question your posting asks: why does one flow convert better than another, and can you prove it.

Right now at Applied Materials I automate repetitive forecasting work with AI agents built on Claude, so time goes to the trade-off calls instead of the spreadsheet, the same instinct a high-velocity experimentation program depends on to move fast without guessing.

I would like to bring that combination, growth-funnel numbers on both the acquisition and retention side, plus hands-on consumer product ownership, to the team growing Robinhood Gold.
