

Adhithya Rokhith Bhaskar

San Francisco Bay Area, CA | arokhith@gmail.com | +1-929-563-9974

September 22, 2026

Hiring Team, 6sense

At Sensata I ran the go-to-market motion for a new sensing product line by treating distributor and OEM partners as co-owners of positioning, channel and launch, not an audience for a finished plan. That closed the line's first year at $2M+ in revenue, and it is the same instinct your posting describes: co-marketing partners feel is theirs, built end to end rather than handed to them at the asset stage.

I built the enablement decks and case studies 50+ reps carried into partner and customer conversations on that same line, and win rates moved 30% because the material answered the objection a partner-facing rep actually hears mid-call, not the one marketing assumes going in. I got there by running 30+ interviews with the OEM and distributor partners themselves before writing a word of it.

None of that came with authority over the teams I needed. At Applied Materials I partner across Sales, Engineering and Accounts with no reporting line to any of them to build one market view, and at Sensata I raised distributor and channel-partner margins from 53% to 61% by negotiating the numbers directly with the partners who held them. I also built the KPI frameworks and closed-loop Mar-Tech reporting that turned campaign activity into a figure leadership could defend, the same attribution discipline partner-sourced pipeline needs to hold up in a QBR.

I automate the recurring reporting behind that work with AI agents built on Claude at Applied Materials, so the metrics infrastructure runs itself instead of eating the week a partner-facing role needs for the partners themselves. That is the pattern I would bring to 6sense: make the partner a co-owner of the program, and back it with a number finance trusts. Proof trail at adhi-product-ai.vercel.app/ref/6sense. Happy to talk whenever works on your side.

Adhithya Rokhith Bhaskar