Hiring Team, SpaceXSI

Your posting puts this role at the intersection of Sales, Legal, Finance, Product and Business Operations, structuring and closing the enterprise deals that drive growth while also systematizing how those deals get done. That split, close one deal and build the system behind the next ten, is the exact split I run inside PriceKeel, the company I founded: I own its CRM, CPQ and quote-to-approval workflow myself, including the discount guardrail and approval matrix that routes an exception to the right owner and the Finance audit trail that backs it afterward.

The deal side of that split is the half I have already been graded on. At Sensata I closed AP26 revenue models and multimillion-dollar customer quotes with senior executives on non-standard terms for a multi-$100M Industrial BU, driving +12% YoY revenue and +8% market share through competitive benchmarking of 10+ players. The same role recovered $700K+ in margin in 2 quarters through the Bleeders and Leakers program, built deal by deal from competitive gaps and customer willingness to pay rather than a blanket discount change, and raised distributor margins from 53% to 61% by repricing the terms themselves so the gain held past the next cycle instead of drifting back.

The systematizing half maps to the same FY2026 Bleeders and Leakers Power BI dashboard: 1,200 pricing opportunities tracked against a $627M target across 3 regions, 4 product families and 20 product lines, surfacing $433M in margin gaps so leadership could prioritize instead of chasing anecdotes. That is the pattern-spotting and surfacing-to-finance work your posting names directly, and it is also why PriceKeel's guardrail engine exists: I kept hitting the same exception twice and built the rule instead of re-litigating it every time. I automate the recurring parts of my own pricing analysis with Claude AI agents at Applied Materials today, so a review starts from a flagged opportunity instead of a blank spreadsheet.

What I would bring to SpaceXSI's deal desk is someone who has already closed non-standard enterprise terms with executives inside a multi-$100M business and then built the approval workflow and audit trail a scaling deal desk needs next, without waiting to be handed a playbook first.
