

Adhithya Rokhith Bhaskar

San Francisco Bay Area, CA | arokhith@gmail.com | +1-929-563-9974

September 22, 2026

Hiring Team, Deputy

Your posting for Senior Regional Marketing Manager asks for someone who can turn a lead capture and nurture workflow into pipeline, not just run channels. At Plug Power I built exactly that: automated the WordPress and Pardot lead-nurture workflow end to end, which cut cost per lead 50% while bid optimization across Google, Microsoft, Meta and LinkedIn cut CPA 25%. The channel mix rarely explains the result on its own. The handoff into nurture is where most of that number actually came from, and it is the piece a lot of demand-gen plans skip over.

Region-specific execution has been the constant thread through my last few roles, not a new ask. At Pixis I ran paid and retail media across international, non-English markets for an eight-client SMB and D2C portfolio, each with its own budget between $15K and $90K a month, and cut churn on that book 50% by building account strategy per region instead of running one global playbook. Earlier at GenY Medium I sat between regional marketing managers, localization and analytics, translating what worked in one market into a plan another region could actually run, which is close to the coordination role your posting describes.

SMB demand generation also lives or dies on the analytics and CRM plumbing behind it, and that is where I spend most of my week now. I built KPI frameworks in SQL and GA4 at Sensata across 50,000-plus connected devices, and I work Salesforce, Pardot and HubSpot for lead scoring and MQL handoff day to day. I also automate the recurring parts of campaign reporting with AI agents built on Claude, so the time saved there goes back into the regional plans themselves rather than into another dashboard refresh.

What I would bring to Deputy is a demand-gen track record that already spans regions, channels and the lead-flow automation behind them, plus current hands-on Salesforce and Pardot use. Proof trail at adhi-growth-ai.vercel.app/ref/deputy.

Adhithya Rokhith Bhaskar