Hiring Team, Onehouse

At PriceKeel I am the entire CRM, CPQ and deal-approval function. I built the pipeline reviews, set the discount guardrails and recorded the audit trail Finance would ask for, before I ever had a team to hand any of it to. That is the same "wears multiple hats, owns day-to-day execution where needed" job you are describing for a Chief of Staff, just one company earlier and with a board of one.

The CEO-support side of the role is just as familiar. Every role on my resume since 2024 runs on the same operating cadence: board decks, OKRs, weekly and quarterly reviews. At Sensata I built the FY2026 Bleeders and Leakers dashboard that tracked 1,200 pricing opportunities against a $627M target, then turned that into $700K+ recovered margin in two quarters working directly with senior executives on revenue models and site-transition strategy. That is the metrics-into-a-decision work a Chief of Staff hands a CEO before a board meeting, not after it.

External representation is not new ground either. PriceKeel means selling directly to RevOps, Sales and Finance leaders against the CPQ tools they already use, and this year at Applied Materials I have been turning three competing views of the same market, from Sales, Engineering and Accounts, into one number people can actually forecast against. Those are the "problems without a natural owner" this role is built around, and I like picking them up rather than waiting for someone to assign them.

A fresh Series B and a team with Uber, Snowflake and Confluent on their resumes is exactly the stage I want to be useful at: senior enough to run point on a board deck without hand-holding, early enough that the GTM operation still has real gaps worth owning. Happy to talk through where you would point me first.
