Hiring Team, GlossGenius

Two things made me stop scrolling on this JD.

First: "Vertical SaaS or beauty/wellness SMB customer experience" as a preferred qual. At Pixis, I managed campaigns for one of India's largest beauty brands -- a D2C e-commerce business where the funnel looked nothing like a B2B SaaS funnel. Beauty customers click on vibes, not features. They convert on social proof, not spec sheets. I restructured that brand's entire purchase funnel and delivered 3x ROAS in a single month. That vertical instinct -- knowing that beauty buyers are a different animal -- is something I'd bring from day one.

Second: "Expert knowledge of AI tools and hands-on implementation experience." I didn't just experiment with AI tools. I hold four Anthropic certifications (Claude 101, Claude Code 101, Cowork, Building with Claude API) and I built a financial analytics product using Claude's API in Cursor -- Python backend, rule-based scoring, interactive web dashboard. At SwipeHire, I used AI to generate and test landing page copy at a pace I couldn't have done manually -- 8 rounds of A/B testing on messaging in weeks, not months. 25% lift in activation. When your JD says "AI-powered personalization, chatbots, content generation, and testing tools," I've already been in that kitchen.

The CRO fundamentals are solid too: at Plug Power I owned landing page strategy across Google, SA360, and Meta -- A/B tested messaging, audiences, and creatives to deliver -25% CPA. At GenY, I rebuilt catalog feeds and Shopping campaigns from scratch, delivering 16x ROAS for a D2C brand by treating every product page like a conversion opportunity.

GlossGenius is building a growth engine for beauty professionals, and the website is the front door. I want to be the person who makes that front door convert.
