Hiring Team, Consumer Bank Marketing, JPMorgan Chase

Journey mapping without activation ownership is just research. Activation without journey context is just email marketing. The rare hire is the person who connects both: maps the end-to-end experience, identifies the worst touchpoint, and then owns the intervention that fixes it. That connection between insight and execution is what your JD is really asking for, and it is the work I have already been doing.

At Sensata I ran 30+ structured customer interviews with OEMs and distributors across NA and EU. But I did not just deliver a research report. I spent the first three weeks facilitating cross-functional alignment workshops with product, sales, pricing, and 3 regional GMs to agree on what questions mattered before any interview happened. Then I mapped where deals were actually stalling (rarely where Sales said), built the enablement materials that fixed those touchpoints, and measured the result: CSAT lifted 22%, partner win rates went up 30%. The insight fed the intervention. The intervention fed the measurement. Closed loop.

At SwipeHire I did the activation half of this job from zero. I designed the full onboarding-to-activation journey for a two-sided AI platform: mapped every touchpoint from landing page to first value moment, instrumented GA4 and GTM event tracking before launch, then ran 8+ A/B tests on confirmation screens, onboarding flows, and next-best-action messaging. Activation lifted 25%. 50+ users onboarded. The testing was not a side project. It was the operating cadence.

Three other things from the JD that line up directly:

Lifecycle CRM from scratch. At Plug Power I built HubSpot email automation, Salesforce pipeline workflows, segmentation logic, and trigger-based activation emails for B2B buyers. Configured the confirmation and nurture cadences, A/B tested messaging and timing, and built closed-loop attribution via Adobe Analytics. -25% CPA, +20% conversion. This is the same muscle as "own confirmation emails and next-best actions."

Research backlog management with agencies. At Sensata I manage a 100+ item backlog in Agile across internal teams and external partners. Coordinating prioritization, stakeholder alignment, and execution cadence. Cut time-to-market 20%. The JD asks for "own and manage the customer research backlog with internal and external agency partners." Same system.

Qual plus quant synthesis. I built a SQL and GA4 measurement framework on 50K+ connected devices at Sensata (quant) and layered it with 30+ structured interviews (qual) to produce recommendations that senior executives acted on. Feature adoption lifted 18%. The synthesis is what made it land, not either data source alone.

MS Marketing Analytics (Simon, U. of Rochester); BE Mechanical Engineering (BITS Pilani). Boston-based.

Would love 15 to 20 minutes to hear what the biggest pain point in the "becoming a customer" journey looks like right now.
