Hiring Team, Capital One,

Performance marketing for high-LTV financial products is the work I have been preparing for since my first paid campaign. I obsess over the same loop Capital One runs every day: spend a dollar on a Paid Search, Paid Social, or programmatic placement, attribute it through ad click to application to funded account, and prove the cohort LTV is worth the next dollar. I have built that loop from scratch at Plug Power, scaled it across 8 clients at Pixis, and translated it into D2C revenue at GenY.

Direct evidence of fit:

- Multi-channel paid performance, Plug Power: Owned Paid Search, Paid Social, and Programmatic for a high-consideration B2B buyer. -25% CPA and +20% conversion via keyword research, bid management, audience segmentation, and creative A/B testing.
- Closed-loop attribution, ad click to SQL: Rebuilt the MarTech stack on HubSpot + Salesforce + Adobe Analytics + GA4 + GTM. Surfaced CAC payback by product family to inform investment allocation - the exact discipline a financial-services performance team runs on application volume and funded accounts.
- 16x ROAS for a D2C consumer brand, GenY: Rebuilt Google Merchant Center and Meta catalogs with dynamic product ads, audience segmentation, and creative testing.
- Cohort LTV and retention, Pixis: Managed an 8-client portfolio with per-client budgets of $15K-$90K/month. Built cohort LTV and retention playbooks tied to channel ROI; cut churn 50%. Ran retail media (Amazon, Criteo) and iOS paid UA on AppsFlyer + Adjust.
- Analytics depth: SQL, GA4, Adobe Analytics, Power BI, Tableau, SA360, holdout incrementality testing. MS Marketing Analytics, Simon Business School (U. of Rochester).

Capital One's culture of test-and-learn, analytical rigor, and direct ownership of the funnel is exactly the environment I want to compound in. Open to McLean or Richmond on-site. Looking forward to talking.
