Hiring Team, Blacksmith Agency

At Pixis I ran 8 clients at once with my own media budgets, $15K to $90K a client per month, and cut churn 50% doing it. The part of your posting that describes this seat as a blend of analytical depth, strong communication and execution oversight across a multi-client book is not new territory for me. It is the job I already had.

I also think running paid and organic in separate lanes is how agency accounts stall instead of grow. At Plug Power I owned paid search and paid social across Google Ads, Microsoft Ads, Meta and LinkedIn while running the SEO partnerships that raised organic visibility 35%, and treating both as one plan is a real part of why CPA came down 25% at the same time. I would build your 90 day, 6 month and annual roadmaps the same way: one plan, one owner, paid and organic pulling in the same direction instead of two specialists working past each other.

A client only trusts a number if the attribution behind it holds up. At Plug Power I closed the loop on Mar-Tech reporting (Salesforce, Adobe Analytics, GA, Google Tag Manager) so every KPI a client saw was one the team could stand behind, and at Sensata I built the SQL and GA4 frameworks that did the same job on a different stack, lifting qualified leads 35% on the campaigns they covered. That is the QA bar I would hold for a portfolio of PPC and SEO clients across multifamily, B2B and technical verticals, and the kind of audit work I would bring to the campaigns, bidding structures and landing pages already running.

I am also automating reporting QA with Claude AI agents in my current role at Applied Materials, and I would like to put that same instinct for cleaner attribution to work on your client roster instead of just my own. Proof trail at adhi-growth.vercel.app/ref/blacksmith-agency.
