Hiring Team, Gantri

Your posting draws a line between a builder of systems and a firefighter. I would push that further: most digital marketing manager openings hire for the firefighter role even when they write the job description for the systems builder, because nobody actually owns the reporting layer end to end. At Plug Power I owned $100K/month in Paid Search and Paid Social budgets across Google Ads, Microsoft Ads, Meta and LinkedIn, then automated the Mar-Tech stack (Salesforce, Adobe Analytics, GA, Google Tag Manager) into one closed-loop, cross-channel tracking and reporting system instead of a deck I rebuilt by hand every month. CPA dropped 25%, cost per lead dropped 50%, and the reporting kept running after I moved to the next test.

I have also sat on the agency side of the exact relationship you are hiring someone to own. At Pixis, an ad-tech platform, I hired and managed an 8-person team running paid media for 8 D2C clients at $15K-$90K a month each. That means I know what a tight creative brief and testing roadmap look like from both chairs, and what makes a paid media or email agency relationship worth the retainer versus worth rebidding.

Design-led DTC is not new ground either. I rebuilt Google Merchant Center and Meta catalog feeds for D2C e-commerce brands at GenY Medium, landing 16x ROAS, and ran a full-funnel restructuring for a fashion D2C brand at Pixis (shopping feed cleanup, smart bidding, creative refresh, lookalike expansion) that delivered 3x ROAS in one month. A catalog of Gantri's own designed products is exactly the kind of inventory that restructuring work was built for.

I automate the recurring part of this work with AI agents built on Claude at Applied Materials today, so the testing roadmap and the reporting layer both keep moving between review cycles instead of waiting on one person. I would like to bring the system, not just the channels, to Gantri's digital marketing engine. Proof trail at adhi-growth.vercel.app/ref/gantri.
