Hiring Team, Happen Bank

Taking a product from a blank page to $2M+ in first-year revenue is the kind of work your New Initiatives team is describing: own positioning, get the metrics right, and launch before the window closes. At Sensata I did that for a new sensing product line, building the value propositions, running the launch across North America and Europe, and pressure-testing the story with 30+ customer interviews before it ever reached a rep's hands.

Success metrics are not an afterthought in my work, they are the launch plan. I built the SQL and GA4 KPI framework that tracked adoption across 50K+ connected devices, catching which cohorts were actually using a new feature instead of guessing from a dashboard summary. The same discipline applies to a new lending product: know what adoption looks like before the campaign goes live, not after it is too late to adjust.

New-initiative work rarely stays inside one team. At Applied Materials I turn Sales, Engineering and Accounts input into one market view that Pricing and Leadership can act on, and before that I ran the paid and lifecycle campaigns, email, Google, Meta, LinkedIn, that got a launch's message to the right audience once positioning was set. I also automate the repetitive parts of my own analysis with AI agents built on Claude, so more time goes into the judgment calls a new product launch actually needs.

A New Initiatives team launching new lending products while the bank itself rebrands is exactly the kind of fast-moving, concept-to-launch work I look for. Proof trail at adhi-product.vercel.app/ref/happen-bank.
