

Adhithya Rokhith Bhaskar

San Francisco Bay Area, CA | arokhith@gmail.com | +1-929-563-9974

October 7, 2026

Hiring Team, Arogyam

Your posting warns off anyone chasing a founder's office tag or a research-and-slides seat. I set up PriceKeel's own CRM, CPQ, forecast and deal-approval flow by hand, before I ever built a deck about it, because nobody else was going to do that work. That is the same instinct this EIR seat is testing for: take a raw idea, make it concrete, and do the unglamorous part yourself until it runs.

The Obesity Killer Kit's growth curve is a channel-and-retention problem at its core, and that is work I have already run on the D2C side. At GenY Medium I rebuilt Google Merchant Center and Meta catalog feeds for D2C e-commerce brands and drove 16x ROAS, the same feed-and-channel rebuild that turns a product people already buy into new acquisition and advocacy loops. Turning customers into promoters is not a new idea to me; it is the mechanism behind that number.

Driving execution across people who do not report to you is the other half of the job, and I have done it with both employees and outside vendors. At Pixis I hired and ran an 8-person team carrying 8 client P&L's, cutting churn 50% through proactive account work and vertical playbooks I wrote because none existed. At Plug Power I automated the Mar-Tech stack across Salesforce, Adobe Analytics and Google Tag Manager once the manual reporting process became the actual blocker on decisions, not the campaigns themselves.

At 10x growth with a 50 Cr ARR target, my guess is the next bottleneck is not the next campaign idea but the handful of playbooks nobody has written down yet: fulfillment, retention loops, and the sequencing for launching a new channel without breaking the ones already working. That is the kind of unglamorous, high-leverage work I would want to pick up first. Proof trail at adhithyabhaskar.vercel.app/ref/arogyam.

Adhithya Rokhith Bhaskar