Hiring Team, Chime

At Sensata I owned go-to-market for a line of new sensing products that OEM and distributor engineers had to trust before they would spec it into their own equipment. The positioning work that earned that trust, turning a dense technical spec into a value story an engineer and a buyer could both act on, drove $2M+ in first-year revenue and a 15% conversion lift on the launches where it landed hardest. Your Lending req asks for the same muscle pointed at a different kind of trust: a member deciding whether a personal loan product is one they can rely on. That's the job I'm applying for.

I didn't get that launch right by writing copy first. I ran 30+ customer interviews with OEM and distributor buyers before the positioning was final, and used what they told me to influence what actually shipped on the roadmap, which is part of why CSAT moved 22%. I ran the same discipline on the competitive side: tracking purchasing patterns and competitor share across EMEA and the US so the battlecards I built for 50+ reps held up in a contested deal, not just in a slide review. That combination, audience insight feeding the roadmap and competitive intelligence feeding the field, is the same loop your role runs across Product, Growth, Brand and Analytics.

I also carry the business-outcome side of this, not just the launch. As Pricing Lead at Sensata I shaped multimillion-dollar customer quotes with senior executives while weighing margin risk on every deal, and drove +12% revenue and +8% market share through price realignment built on competitive benchmarking. Now at Applied Materials I build the financial forecasts and value-based pricing behind a fast-moving semiconductor market, aligning Sales, Engineering and Accounts on one view, and I clear the repetitive analysis work with AI agents built on Claude so more time goes into the strategy itself.

A loan product earns adoption the same way a sensing product earns a design win: the story has to survive contact with someone who has every reason to be skeptical. I'd welcome the chance to talk through how that GTM and positioning discipline maps onto Chime's personal loan line. Proof trail at adhi-product.vercel.app/ref/chime.
