Adhithya Rokhith Bhaskar

San Francisco Bay Area, CA | arokhith@gmail.com | +1-929-563-9974

November 3, 2026

Hiring Team, LeanData

Your posting says the Chief of Staff is "a right-hand to the CEO, but not a gatekeeper." I run my own version of that seat right now. As Founder and CEO of PriceKeel, there is no department to route an unowned problem to; it lands on my desk, and I turn it into a decision, a CRM and CPQ process built from zero, or an investor update for our first round. That instinct, structuring ambiguity before someone else has to, is the whole job description.

The clearest proof of the execution side is the Bleeders and Leakers program at Sensata: a margin mandate with no existing owner, no existing dashboard, and no existing cadence, across a $627M target. I built the structure around it myself, turning 1,200 scattered pricing opportunities into a $433M shortlist, then negotiated $700K plus of it back into margin in two quarters while partnering directly with senior executives on the AP26 models and site-transition calls the outcome depended on. That is the same shape as your QBR ask: define the structure, the metrics and the cadence, then own the follow-through.

The OKR and QBR cadence itself is not new territory either. I have run it at four stops now: weekly and quarterly business reviews, the leadership decks behind them, and the cross-functional work with Sales, Engineering and Accounts that keeps a company-wide view honest. At Applied Materials today that means turning scattered field input into one market-sizing view; at Sensata it meant raising distributor and channel-partner margins from 53% to 61% by building the partnerships that made repricing possible in the first place. Rhythm of the business is not an abstraction to me; it is what I build before anyone asks for it.

What I would bring on day one is comfort picking up whatever is unstaffed that week, strategic planning, a new initiative's business case, or a partnership that needs tending, and closing it out instead of waiting for someone to hand me a clean mandate. Proof trail at adhithyabhaskar.vercel.app/ref/leandata.

Adhithya Rokhith Bhaskar