

Adhithya Rokhith Bhaskar

San Francisco Bay Area, CA | arokhith@gmail.com | +1-929-563-9974

September 21, 2026

Hiring Team, Writer

Your posting names the two things that usually pull in opposite directions for a paid marketing manager: scale campaigns with AI, and go deeper on account-based marketing for enterprise accounts. I have already been building toward both at once. At Applied Materials I use AI agents built on Claude to run my own forecasting and market-sizing reporting, not as a demo but because rebuilding the same analysis every cycle wastes a decision-maker's time. That same instinct, use AI to personalize and scale, not just to automate, is what this role is asking for.

The enterprise and account-level muscle is just as direct. At Sensata I shaped multimillion-dollar customer quotes and AP26 revenue models with senior executives, the kind of long, high-stakes sales cycle paid programs have to stay in step with. At Plug Power I owned $100K/month in paid budgets across multiple business units, running Paid Search and Paid Social across Google Ads, Microsoft Ads, Meta and LinkedIn, cutting CPA 25% through bid and targeting optimization while a rebuilt lead-flow automation cut cost per lead 50%. At Pixis I carried P&L for an 8-client, $15K-$90K-per-client-per-month portfolio and cut client churn 50% through account-specific strategy, which is ABM logic applied one client at a time.

What stands out about the role is that it reports into lifecycle marketing rather than sitting off to the side of it. I have run paid and email launch campaigns together before at Sensata, where aligning paid media with lifecycle and brand messaging drove +35% qualified leads, so I know the coordination that structure asks for is real work, not just a reporting line.

I would like to bring that combination, AI-personalized paid execution and enterprise account rigor, to Writer's paid programs. Proof trail at adhi-growth-ai.vercel.app/ref/writer.

Adhithya Rokhith Bhaskar