Hiring Team, Airwallex

I founded PriceKeel because a B2B SaaS deal desk had no product that could explain a discount to Finance, so Sales guessed and Finance audited after the fact. I built the guardrail engine that reads the deal platform, recommends an explainable discount range learned from a company's own closed deals, and keeps the audit trail Finance can actually check. That is the same shape of problem T:0 is going after, just for the rest of a founder's finance stack: payroll, bookkeeping and tax are still work a person does by hand, and someone has to invent the agent that does it instead, from a blank page.

I know what that invention work looks like day to day, not just at the pitch level. At Sensata I took the sensor product line from a blank roadmap to a 100+ feature backlog zero-to-one, running Agile delivery across 3 regions and cutting time-to-market 20%. None of that came from guessing what engineering could build; it came from 30+ structured interviews with the OEM and distributor engineers who had to live with the product, and from KPI frameworks I built in SQL and GA4 across 50K+ connected devices to check my own read of the interviews against what usage data actually said.

I also build with the AI tools your team is choosing between every day, not just around them. I shipped SwipeHire, an AI job-matching platform, zero-to-one on the OpenAI API: wrote the PRD, scoped the MVP, and onboarded 50+ early users off my own GTM and analytics stack. At Applied Materials I automate the repetitive parts of market and pricing analysis with AI agents built on Claude, so I come to an agentic product problem already comfortable choosing between prompting, fine-tuning and a fully agentic workflow instead of defaulting to whichever one is trending.

What I would bring to T:0 is a founder's instinct for structuring a hard problem before writing a PRD, paired with the discipline of grounding every roadmap call in a customer conversation and the data behind it. Proof trail at adhi-product-ai.vercel.app/ref/airwallex.
