Hiring Team, Netic

At Sensata I owned the full GTM for a new line of sensing products, positioning, pricing, channel and launch, with no existing playbook to lean on, and it drove $2M+ in first-year revenue. That is the same zero-to-one motion your posting describes: sharpen positioning across a dozen personas, then see the launch through to the end.

I also know what it takes to arm a sales team hearing objections in real time. I built the battlecards, case studies and launch decks that armed 50+ reps at Sensata and moved win rates up 30%, and I shaped multimillion-dollar customer quotes directly with senior executives, the CEO and finance level conversation your essential-service buyers run through before anything closes.

At Applied Materials I automate my own market research and competitive analysis with AI agents built on Claude, and I partner directly with Sales, Engineering and Accounts to turn field input into one market view, the same loop you're describing between engineering, sales and the market. I have also sat in the founder's seat myself: I built an AI job-matching platform from a blank page, owning positioning, ICP and GTM alone.

Netic's bet, that essential-service leaders deserve a real alternative to AI vaporware, is the kind of positioning fight I like best: a differentiated story with a direct feedback loop into the growth and sales teams running the tests. I would welcome a conversation about how I would approach your first dozen personas.
