Hiring Team, Artisan Partners

Your posting asks for someone who can turn competitor and industry data into positioning that senior stakeholders act on. At Sensata I built that pipeline end to end: benchmarking 10+ competitors across the Industrial BU, then turning the findings into a price realignment that drove +12% YoY revenue and +8% market share.

The executive-reporting half of the role is where I spent most of the last year. I built the FY2026 Bleeders and Leakers Power BI dashboard: 1,200 pricing opportunities tracked against a $627M target by win rate, dollar per win and stage distribution across 3 regions and 20 product lines. That dashboard surfaced $433M in margin gaps and let leadership prioritize by salesperson and product line instead of guessing, the same job a competitive-intelligence report has to do for a board or an investment team: compress a pile of data into the three numbers that change a decision. I also partnered with senior executives directly on AP26 revenue models and site-transition strategy, so I am used to sitting in the room where that reporting gets used, not just building it and handing it off.

I ran a similar exercise outside Sensata too: leading a 5-consultant team at Simon Business School that took 170 facilities down to a 28-site addressable market, benchmarking competitors and assessing market-entry feasibility across 4 verticals for Safran's leadership. Competitive intelligence work only earns its keep when it survives contact with the people who have to defend the recommendation, and that is the standard I hold it to.

Global Distribution needs someone who partners across Finance, Sales and Engineering without waiting to be asked, which is exactly how I have worked at every stop, most recently automating the repetitive parts of that research with Claude-based AI agents so more time goes to the analysis itself.
