Hiring Team, ThoughtSpot

Your Senior Manager, Digital Growth Marketing posting asks for someone who runs paid media and organic search as one budget, not two line items split across separate teams. I built exactly that at Pixis, hiring and managing an 8-person team covering agency and client relationships across 8 clients, each one carrying its own P&L and revenue targets. At Plug Power I ran that same combined motion at the channel level: $100K/month paid budgets across Google, Microsoft, Meta and LinkedIn, bid optimization and A/B testing that cut CPA 25%, and a parallel SEO push that raised organic visibility 35% by closing keyword-strategy gaps, paid and organic moving together rather than as two separate workstreams.

The cross-functional half of this role, pulling product marketing, sales, web and design into one growth motion and reporting the attribution story up, is not new either. At Plug Power I tied SEM performance to MQL quality and stage-1 pipeline, automated the WordPress and Pardot lead flow (cost per lead down 50%), and partnered with design on 15+ A/B tests across landing pages and creative. At Sensata, channel realignment built on competitive benchmarking across 10+ players drove +12% YoY revenue and +8% market share, the same budget-allocation discipline this role asks for at the program level.

I automate the recurring half of this work instead of re-running it by hand every week. At Applied Materials I build forecasting and demand models with AI agents built on Claude, so the hours go into the next read instead of rebuilding the last one. At Pixis, Amplitude and Tableau tied user behavior to campaign ROAS, lifting it 40% across 30+ campaigns, the kind of measurement and attribution rigor that keeps a budget-allocation call honest instead of a guess.

ThoughtSpot's pipeline runs on an AI analytics story that moves fast, and I would want to spend the first weeks finding where paid and organic are pulling in different directions and closing that gap the way I did at Plug Power. Proof trail at adhi-growth-ai.vercel.app/ref/thoughtspot.
