Hiring Team, Groww

At Pixis I hired and managed an 8-person team running 8 client accounts, each with its own media budget ($15K to $90K a month) and its own P&L target. Churn was the number that decided whether that P&L held up, and I cut it 50% across the whole book by fixing account strategy and retention playbooks before touching a single bid. A platform at Groww's scale lives on that same discipline between acquisition and retention, and that is the operating pattern I would bring to a Head of Growth seat.

SEO and SEM are where I actually spend my time, not where I delegate. At Plug Power I ran SEM across Google Ads, Microsoft Ads, Meta and LinkedIn while raising organic search visibility 35% by closing keyword-strategy gaps and building search partnerships, and I owned $100K/month in budgets across multiple business units end to end. At Pixis that same SEM and SEO discipline extended into iOS app UA on AppsFlyer and Adjust and PPC across international, non-English markets, which is the closest analog to running acquisition for a consumer app at Groww's user base.

I also carry the operating side of a growth seat, not just the channel mix. I build the leadership decks, run the OKR cadence, and have carried P&L and revenue targets at both Pixis and in my current role at Applied Materials, where I also automate repetitive analysis and reporting with AI agents built on Claude. Before that I led pricing at Sensata, recovering $700K+ in margin in two quarters, so I know how to protect the unit economics behind a growth number once the channel work is done.

What I would bring on day one is a team-leadership and P&L track record at this same scale, SEO and SEM depth that matches what the role asks for directly, and a bias for hiring and running the team rather than just the campaigns. Proof trail at adhi-growth.vercel.app/ref/groww.
