Hiring Team, Fieldwire by Hilti

Your posting asks for a product marketer who can bridge Product, Sales and Customer Success on a single launch, and build the win-loss intelligence and sales-enablement materials that hold up in an enterprise sales cycle. At Sensata, I owned the end-to-end go-to-market for a new line of sensing products sold through OEMs and distributors across North America and Europe, positioning, messaging, channel and launch, and it drove $2M+ in first-year revenue. The less visible half of that work was running 30+ structured interviews with OEMs and distributors to pressure-test messaging before it shipped, then arming 50+ reps with the decks and case studies that moved win rates 30%. That is the same loop a construction-tech buyer runs: field input in, enablement out.

I read Fieldwire's enterprise and large-contractor segment as close kin to the industrial buyers I already sell into. Sensata's and Applied Materials' customers are OEMs, distributors and engineering teams who buy on technical proof, not brand, and my job has been turning that proof into positioning a non-technical buyer can act on. At Sensata, tracking competitor moves and market share across EMEA and the US fed directly into the positioning and launch calls that keep a GTM calendar honest, the same discipline a product launch team needs when it is watching a competitive landscape shift under it.

Pricing and value propositions are where I go deepest. As Pricing Lead at Sensata I drove +12% YoY revenue and +8% market share through price-realignment decisions built on competitive benchmarking across 10+ players, and closed multimillion-dollar customer quotes directly with senior executives. That is the same muscle this role needs when a messaging and value-proposition call has real deal economics riding on it, not just a brand preference.

At Applied Materials today I automate my own recurring market and competitive analysis with AI agents built on Claude rather than rebuilding the same report every cycle, a habit that would free up real hours for the launches, battlecards and content this role is built around.
